20 Teves 5640/1880

Harav Yaakov Abuchatzzeira, the Abir Yaakov, zt"l

The legendary name Abuchatzzeira comes to the fore in the person of Rav Shmuel Abuchatzzeira, described by the Chida as an Ish Elokim Kadosh. His son, Rav Masoud, became the Rav in the Moroccan city of Tafelatech, and was followed in this position by his son, Harav Yaakov, known as the Abir Yaakov.

Rav Yaakov was among the leaders of Jewry in North Africa. His name was revered and mentioned with awe, as he was known as a leading mekubal.

He was in contact on halachic issues with many of the era's great Rabbanim, and his correspondence became the basis of his work, Yoru Mishpatecha L'Yaakov.

Rav Yaakov authored many sefarim, on all facets of Torah: on Chumash, Shas, Halachah, Kabbalah and Drashos. In his humility, he didn't publish them during his lifetime; after his petirah, however, he appeared in a dream to his son and instructed him to print them.

Rav Yaakov was niftar en route to Eretz Yisrael, where he was headed to fulfill his heart's desire, on 20 Teves 5640/1880, and was buried in Dimanhur, Egypt.

Distinguished Family

Harav Shmuel Abuchatzzeira was the father of the Abuchatzzeira dynasty. He was born and lived in Yerushalayim, but in his later years, he moved to Damascus. He was described by Harav Chaim Yosef David Azoulai, the Chida, as an Ish Elokim Kadosh.

The original family name was Elbaz; Rav Shmuel, a man of nisim and spiritual greatness, changed the name from Elbaz to Abuchatzzeira because of a miracle that happened to him: Once he was sent as a shaliach on behalf of the Sefardic kollel. When he reached the port of Yaffo, the captain refused to let him on board. Having no other choice, Rav Shmuel made himself a raft, or mat, out of reeds — chatzeira in Arabic — and floated behind the boat to his destination. He was thus named Abuchatzzeira, commemorating this event.

Some of his descendants moved from Eretz Yisrael and settled in North Africa, the most well known of which is Harav Machloul Abuchatzzeira, who lived in Morocco.

A large contingent of the family settled in Tafelatech, in Morocco.

Holy From Birth

Harav Yaakov Abuchatzzeira, the Abir Yaakov, was born in Tafelatech, Morocco, in 5566/1806, to his father Harav Masoud. According to his grandson Harav Meir Abuchatzzeira, this was on the same day that the Chida, Harav Chaim Yosef David Azoulai, was niftar.

Before Rav Yaakov was born, Rav Masoud had a dream. In the dream, he was told that he and his wife should prepare themselves for they would be blessed with a child who would enlighten all of Klal Yisrael.

His father, the Rav of Tafelatech, taught him all of Tanach with the Taamim, later moving on to learn with him all of the Shishah Sidrei Mishnah, and then the entire Shas.

At the age of just sixteen, he received warm praise from Harav Mordechai ben Shaul, who composed a song in his honor.

Many complicated she'eilos were sent to him, from leading Rabbanim and poskim. They were not only from Algeria and Morocco, but from even more distant locations, such as Lisbon and London.

Many of these she'eilos and teshuvos appear in his sefer Yoru Mishpatecha L'Yaakov.

It is told that on one occasion, Rav Yaakov visited the city of Tetuan (north of Morocco near the Spanish border). At that time, Tetuan's Jewish community was led by Rav Yitzchak ben Wallid (author of Vayomer Yitzchak).

Rav Yaakov had often been in contact with Rav Yitzchak regarding many halachic discussions.

After entering the city anonymously, Rav Yaakov sought lodging at one of the local inns. After a short while, one of Rav Yitzchak's talmidim entered the inn. Sensing that a talmid chacham stood before him, Rav Yaakov sought to engage the youth in a Torah discussion. The young man told Rav Yaakov that Rav Yitzchak's yeshivah was currently studying a particular topic in the Gemara that was extremely difficult to comprehend. Rav Yaakov asked him which sugya, whereupon the student told him which masechta and which sugya.

Immediately upon hearing this, Rav Yaakov pulled out a quill and a sheet of paper from his pack, and proceeded to write down the explanation of the difficult matter. He then handed the paper to the young student, who joyfully departed for the yeshivah and presented it to Rav Yitzchak. As Rav Yitzchak looked at the paper, his eyes lit up. "This is the handwriting of Rav Yaakov Abuchatzzeira!" he exclaimed. He immediately instructed the student to seek out the illustrious visitor and bring him to Rav Yitzchak's house.

It is told that Rav Yaakov was secluded in the attic of Rav Yitzchak's house for eight months, studying Torah and serving Hashem with yiras Shamayim.

After he received semichah, he served as Rav in the community of Tafilat, upon the petirah of his father.

A Life of Learning

Rav Yaakov loved solitude and did not leave the beis medrash all week, day and night, except on leilei Shabbos.

Rav Yaakov's son, Rav Aharon, described his father's daily schedule: He knew the Shishah Sidrei Mishnah by heart, and every night he studied 18 perakim. After that, he studied Shulchan Aruch, Rambam and other poskim and he would review the sources in the Gemara from which their rulings were derived.

Near chatzos he took a nap, then he would arise for tikkun Rachel, and afterwards he would also say tikkun Leah. He would next study leading kabbalistic works until before daybreak, when he would hurry to don his tallis and tefillin, to be one of the first ten to arrive for the minyan. After he davened Shacharis, he would sit and learn Torah, eating only a minimal amount for subsistence.

Rav Yaakov held himself in utmost humility, and shunned all signs of honor. He was known for his great anivus, and for that reason, he never took any credit for anything done under his name. He barely mentions his name in his sefarim, and didn't let them be published during his lifetime, for he felt that they were not worthy of being printed. Only after his petirah did his children publish his many sefarim.

Rav Yaakov was a mekubal, renowned for his piety and accustomed to performing miracles. It is said that Eliyahu Hanavi appeared to him.

His vast knowledge of Kabbalah and sifrei Kabbalah are clearly noticeable in his works.

Despite his familiarity with Kabbalah, Rav Yaakov did not forsake halachah — which he saw as the potion of life, for without it, how would people know how to act — and he dealt with halachah on a daily basis. His son, Rav Avraham, writes in his hakdamah to the sefer Ginzei Hamelech, that there are four groups of talmidei chachamim: those who delve in Gemara study, poskim of halachah, darshanim and those who deal in the hidden Torah, and he adds that all these four things could be said of his father.

Rav Yaakov was a very well-known baal tzedakah and a baal chessed; his home was wide open to guests.

He was also very active on behalf of his brethren, in settling scores between those who had disputes and seeing to alleviate the plight of every individual in strife.

His Petirah

Rav Yaakov strongly desired to go to live in Eretz Yisrael all his life, but the members of his community refused to let him go. He tried to convince them to let him go to Eretz Yisrael six times, and on the sixth time, in 5640/1879, they finally acquiesced. This was because he promised them that his son Harav Masoud would serve as their Rav in his stead.

On the earlier attempts, Rav Yaakov tried to keep it a secret from them and go to Eretz Yisrael clandestinely, but they always caught up with him and brought him back.

This last time, he explained that as he was already old, he felt that it was high time for him to actually go to Eretz Yisrael, to dwell in its holy atmosphere and to gain from the kedushah of the land; he begged that they finally allow him to fulfill his heart's desire. He hinted that he wasn't sure that he would actually make it to the shores of Eretz Yisrael.

Rav Yaakov set out to Eretz Yisrael via the Algerian Sea, Tunisia, Libya and Egypt.

On the previous Shabbos, Rav Yaakov had stayed at the home of Rav Moshe Sharashi, and on Shabbos night during Kiddush, the candles were suddenly extinguished. Rav Yaakov com-
